

One Call Announces Acquisition of High Line Health

Enhanced Data Analytics Will Drive Improved Insight Into Workers' Compensation Claims

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (February 23, 2017) – One Call Care Management (“One Call”), a leading provider of workers’ compensation care management services, today announced it has completed the acquisition of High Line Health, a progressive value-based analytics and data visualization platform.

By distilling large quantities of data into straightforward, actionable reporting, High Line empowers a range of healthcare stakeholders to influence behavior at the individual member level or across an entire population.

“Combining High Line’s dynamic, visual platform with One Call’s unmatched expertise in workers’ compensation will accelerate the pursuit of better outcomes for our customers and injured workers,” said Dale Wolf, President and CEO at One Call. “As the use of analytics in the industry quickly evolves and expands, we are committed to always being at the forefront, cutting through the noise and providing our customers with the relevant data and tools they need to make optimal decisions.”

John Farrell, Founder and CEO of High Line, commented: “Our goal is to offer better insight into the complex relationship between clinical quality and financial reward. We believe these key principles are relevant across all of healthcare, and we look forward to joining One Call and expanding our breadth of focus into workers’ compensation.”

John and the High Line team of data analysts, architects, and actuaries will remain onboard and continue to support and grow their ACO, MCO, and employer relationships from their downtown Manhattan, New York offices. For its workers’ compensation customers, One Call will integrate High Line’s technology and healthcare best practices into its existing clinical and analytic products, further enhancing these market-leading programs.

Together with One Call’s recent HITRUST certification, the High Line acquisition furthers One Call’s goal of being the industry’s trusted provider of secure and insightful data.
